Super Snacks

People all over the world eat snacks. Fruit, crisps, nuts and sweets are popular. True, but what other kinds of snacks are out there? What other snacks do people enjoy?

Do you like fried butter or garlic ice cream? And what about ice cream with fish? You can eat these snacks in some parts of North America.

In some countries in Latin America, some people eat insects like ants, termites and grasshoppers. Roasted ants or grasshoppers make a delicious, crunchy snack.

And in some parts of Asia, some people like eating fried silkworms, water bugs and scorpions on sticks. They make a tasty snack, too.

Insects can also be a sweet snack. In Australia, people like eating honey ants. Their big stomachs are full of sweet juice. In other places, colourful lollipops with insects are popular. How about a sweet cricket, worm or scorpion lollipop?

The world is full of new and interesting food to try. It's snack time!

Weird but true

Cats can't taste sweet food.
