Jennie spent her early years in Shanghai before moving to Beijing with her family. Her father died abruptly when she was ten years old, leaving her mother to raise and maintain their family on her own. Her mother was soon forced to work outside the home to support the family, and Jennie, as the oldest, was forced to assist with the care of her younger siblings. Despite having a lot of responsibilities at home, Jean loved school and was a good student. In 1963, she graduated 10th in her class from Beijing High School.

While still in high school, Jennie met a young man named Charles, at a dance in Beijing; and they were quite taken with each other. Over the next few years, their love for each other blossomed and they were married on February 24, 1964, while Jennie was still in school. At the time, Charles was serving his country in the military, and had come home on leave to marry his sweetheart. Unfortunately, shortly

Probably the most important factor governing the severity of forest fires is weather. Hot, dry weather lowers the moisture content of fuels. Once a fire has started, wind is extremely critical because it influences the oxygen supply and the rate of spread. Forest type and forest conditions are also important factors. For example, fire is more likely to occur in conifers than in hardwoods; slash-covered or brushy areas are especially hazardous because the rate at which combustion consumes fuel is proportional to fuel volume and surface area.

Some fires are caused by lightning; others are caused by people. Those caused by people may be accidental or intentional (incendiary). The causes of fire in the United States show large regional differences. In the Rocky Mountains more than 70 percent of the fires are caused by lightning, while incendiary fires amount to only about 1 percent. In contrast, more than 40 percent of the fires in the South are incendiary, whereas lightning causes only 1 percent.
