LIVEWORKSHEETS

Richard Carapaz is the first Ecuadorian cyclist who win the Giro d'Italia. From riding a bicycle without tires in his native Andes to compete in the Italian Alps. Carapaz now is called 'The Locomotive' of the Carchi.

Selling milk was the main work in his family. When he was a teenager his mother had cancer and young Richie worked in the fields caring three cows. He had a modest family. One day, his father Antonio arrived home with a small BMX which had no seat, no brakes or pedals. The walls of his home are also covered with medals, photos, and memories, including the white jersey for the best young rider at the 2019 Giro d'Italia, with a dedication: "With a lot of love to my parents Ana and Antonio".

Colombian coach Luis Alfonso Cely says Carapaz is a talented person, has a great power in the high mountains. He is a very calm person, and he is sensible enough. Carapaz's parents travelled to Verona along with his wife and two children, to celebrate his achievement. When he returned to Ecuador people honored him in his town with his favorite food - grilled Cuy with potatoes, mellocos, beans, and sweetened morocho.

A cycling school in his native village has his name and a dozen students aged between 9- and 17-years train there. Carapaz said "I want to be an example to those young people, those children, if they have a dream in life work for it. "Dreams were made to be achieved."

My name is Jefferson Pérez, I remember the night at the hotel in Atlanta it was the year 1996, I was alone talking to my uniform and my shoes and even though they were broken on half, I kept telling them to walk and run as fast as the can, I beg you to stay with me during this moment.

The day arrived, I was very short and they put me next to the Europeans I was very nervous but my mother´s blessing was my motivation to continue my dream.

The race began, I was very determined to win it for my beautiful country Ecuador. On my head I was only thinking about my family, and my country.

My body was hurting, but I had to continue, I started to remember when I was a kid selling newspapers to make money to help my blind mother, we were very poor and this was my opportunity to achieve something big, achieve my dream make my family and my country proud.

I could not believe my eyes, I was almost there my dream was about to become true, my old shoes could not go anymore my head was hurting, my legs were hurting but my heart was happy because I won, I achieved my dream despite the difficulties.
