Text 1 for question no. 1 - 5

One of my favorite things is my phone. It is a smartphone. I bought it last year in an expo.

It is the best budget phone. It's also speedy. That's not the only reason why the smartphone, at its reasonable price, is my favorite Android phone. The battery lasts a full day, and the 5.8-inch OLED screen looks ultra-modern. It's compact too! Google slimmed down the bezels (the edges around the display), and it makes this one of the best small Android phones around. Other perks include a plastic body (which means the rear won't shatter if you drop it), NFC for Google Pay, and a headphone jack. This phone also gets monthly security updates and Android version upgrades for three years, which isn't guaranteed even on pricier phones.

There are some weaknesses that belong to my smartphone. There is no water resistance, no MicroSD card slot, and no wireless charging. The dual speakers are quiet, and the screen is dim when it's especially bright outside.

My smartphone has many functions. I use it to send texts, to take pictures and videos, and to access internet. I also use it to talk with someone far away.

Then we have a special custom. After midnight, the first visitor to the house gives us presents, usually shortbreads or coal for good luck. I love Hogmanay because all our friends and family come together andit's a great start to the New Year!
Hogmanay is a Scottish New Year festival which lasts for three days. Scottish people celebrate Hogmanay at the end of December and the beginning of January.
In Edinburgh, Scotland's capital, Hogmanay begins with a torchlight parade on December 30. It's an important time for family and friends. It's a time to say "goodbye" to the old year and welcome the new year.
In my family, before Hogmanay we always clean and decorate the house. Then in the evening we have a big party. At midnight we stand in a circle and sing Auld Lang Syne. It's a song about friends, old friends and new friends.
People throw parties at homes or join in with parades. They sing anddance and tell each other stories.
