New career counseling center to open at local high school

Searching for colleges or making career plans can be daunting for many young adults, but students at South Queensdale High School will soon have a new resource designed to make the process a little easier.

Thanks to donations from local businessmen, the high school has announced that it will open a Job and Career Center next year. As the center's program is still in the planning stages, Ms. Gertrude Applebee, director of the center, welcomes suggestions from the public as to what the center should offer.
