A2-11: Reading

Language Expansion: Everyday ailments

For every common health problem, there's a product for sale to cure it. Are you suffering from insomnia? There's a pill to help you fall asleep. Did a pimple appear on your face? There's a cream for that. If you have a headache after a long day at work, or perhaps a sore throat and fever, you can buy something to make you feel better. Do you have indigestion because you ate the wrong kind of food? There's a pill to end the burning feeling in your stomach. If food won't stay in your stomach at all, you can take some medicine to end the nausea. Or maybe you ate too fast, so now you have the hiccups. Well, you won't find anything at the pharmacy for hiccups, but there's probably a company working on a new product right now.

Some pills can help you with insomnia.	T F NI
The first pill mentioned in the text does not help people with insomnia.	T F NI
A big company is going to present a product to stop hiccups soon.	T F NI
The topic of the text is natural remedies.	T F NI
"That" in the fifth sentences refers to headaches.	T F NI