A Day at the Beach

This is Emily. She is nine years old. Emily lives with her family. Her dad is John. He is a teacher. Her mom is Laura. She is a doctor. Emily has a brother. His name is Jack. Emily's grandparents, Mary and Peter, live with them too.

Today is a sunny day. Emily and her family go to the beach. Emily wears a pink beach cover-up and her yellow cap. Jack wears his red backpack. He fills it with toys.

Mom Laura finds her white bathrobe. "I love this bathrobe," she says. Dad John looks for his brown belt. "Where is my belt?" he asks. Jack finds it under the bed. "Here it is, Dad!" he says.

Grandma Mary gives Emily a brooch. "This brooch is special," says Grandma. Emily smiles. "Thank you, Grandma," she says. Grandpa Peter cleans his black ankle boots. "I wear these today," he says.

Emily wears a green blouse and a blazer. Jack wears his favorite t-shirt and blue capri pants. Mom says, "Take your coats. It can be cold at the beach."

The family is ready. They go to the beach. Grandma Mary wears a big sunhat and a cardigan. Grandpa Peter wears his boots.

At the beach, they swim and play. Emily and Jack build sandcastles. The sun goes down. It is cold now. They put on their coats and watch the sunset.

"Today is a good day," says Dad John. "Yes, it is perfect," says Mom Laura. Emily and Jack are happy. They go home and sleep. They dream of the next family adventure.
