Live the rural life

The English countryside has a classic image. People imagine that life in the country is slow and calm; that there are no traffic jams, no pollution, and no crime. In some places, this is true; but in others it is not.

Small towns and villages are becoming more and more popular; people have more space and most houses have gardens. But problems are growing. Lots of people want to live in the country and work in the city; so more and more people travel long distances each day, to go to work. Of course they don't use buses (they are too slow) or trains (they don't stop in the country); they use cars. And although they live in the country, they want to use supermarkets and good fast roads.... but they do not want to see them or hear them. Besides, lots of young people say that life in the country is boring: there is not enough to do, there are not enough activities and excitements.

Little villages now have traffic problems in the morning, just like big cities! And they are getting worse. On warm summer days, and cold winter days, air pollution can be a big problem in large parts of the south of England, not just in London. Traffic jams are now often part of life, even in the country; crime has become a serious problem in rural areas.

1. The life in the English countryside is like a _____.
2. There are more and more villages and in some places in England _____.
3. Many people enjoy in the country and in the city _____.
4. People don't use or but their cars to work _____ .
5. Like big cities, the countryside has such as: air pollution and traffic jams _____.

Nicole

I'm going to take a gap year before university. I'm going to study Spanish and Portuguese at university, so I am going to South America where they speak both languages. I'm going to spend the first four months in Peru and then I'm going to do volunteer work in Rio. The charity provides education for street children. We're going to build a small school. I'm going to visit some other countries. I'll do part-time jobs while I'm travelling. It will be great experience because I want to work in the tourist industry.

Alice

I'm really excited about my gap year job. I'm going to lead a team of volunteers on a six month conservation project in Cabo Verde, Africa. The aim of the project is to protect turtles, because hunters kill them and sell their shells. We'll build special nests on the beach for the turtles' eggs and then we'll watch the nests at night and check that they're safe. We are going to also clean the beach so the baby turtles can get to the sea safely. I'll earn money but I'm not doing it for that reason. It will be useful experience because I want a career in conservation after university.

Mark

In November, I'm going to the French Alps for six months. For the first eleven weeks, I'm going to do a training course to become a ski instructor. It will be hard work! When I've got the qualification, I'll stay and work until the end of the skiing season. I'll earn about $ 700 a month, plus tips. It's perfect gap year job for me because I love skiing, and I need to save some money for university. But it won't be my career. I want to be a mechanic.
