In the early 17th century, most of the southern region of Vietnam was nearly uninhabited and in the position of Ho Chi Minh City, there was a small village formed with a few residents. However, thanks to its advantage in location, the town grew both economically and politically. By the 19th century, this had become a cultural hub of the South as well as an important trading center of the country.

You might not know that there was a time Saigon was referred to as the Pearl of the Far East. Sadly, having been through various occurrences and two disastrous wars has stunted the city's development. Only after the political instabilities had settled, Saigon recovered miraculously and maintained its leading position in terms of both the economics and culture. Officially named as Ho Chi Minh City, Saigon today has 22 districts in total and attracts hundreds of thousands of tourists annually.

Question 40:

a. In conclusion, I think we should have more blended learning classes at school because they keep us engaged and helps us learn useful skills.

b. Blended learning is a way of studying a subject, which combines learning over the Internet and face-to-face learning, and brings several benefits to us.

c. Secondly, we can develop better communication and teamwork skills in a blended learning class. Since a lot of the work is assigned for homework, we have more time for pair work and group work in the classroom. Unlike traditional learning, blended learning provides us with more ways of communication including text messages, emails or social media.

d. Firstly, blended learning helps us have more control over our own learning. We are able to get access to many online materials and video lectures at any time. This also allows us to watch and review lessons that we have not understood at home. If we are absent from school, we will not miss any lessons.
