POMPEII

Death of a City

On the morning of August 24, 79 C.E., Pompeii was a wealthy Roman city full of people and life. No one thought that in two days the city would become a grave for 2,000 people.

Pompeii is located 8 km from Mt. Vesuvius. The mountain had once been an active volcano, but it had never erupted during the lifetime of anyone in the city. People were, however, used to earthquakes. Perhaps that is why when the earth shook for days before the volcano erupted, no one panicked. People must have thought they were safe, but they were wrong.

The first sign of danger was a strange cloud rising from Mt. Vesuvius. It was a cloud of dark smoke and ash. For about eight hours, the cloud grew and covered a huge area beyond the city. The cloud carried rocks and ash, which fell over Pompeii like rain.

People evacuated the city in terror. That night, however, the rain of rocks and ash stopped. Many people thought the danger was over and returned to their homes.

Around 7:30 the next morning, about 2,000 people were walking around the city, probably looking at the damage from the day before. Suddenly, Mt. Vesuvius exploded, sending a landslide of hot rocks, fire, and gases towards Pompeii. In less than two minutes, it killed everything in its path, and buried the city.

The city was perfectly preserved and remained buried for almost 2,000 years. Now people can learn a lot about how the Ancient Romans lived from studying Pompeii.

TIPS FOR

Improving Your Interview

Congratulations! You have a job interview. Here's how to do your best:

- Prepare Before the interview, read the job description and think about how your skills, abilities, and experience match the requirements of the position. Decide how you'll explain that information.
- Dress the part Although employees of many companies wear casual clothes to work, you should dress formally for an interview. Always wear a suit to look professional.
- Arrive on time Make sure to arrive on time or a few minutes early. Most interviewers agree: There's no excuse for being late.
- Don't be too friendly An interview is a professional meeting. You should be energetic and enthusiastic, but not informal.
- Use good communication skills Listen to questions carefully. Before you give your answer, make sure that it's a correct response to the question.
- Ask questions It's important to ask questions in an interview. It shows your interest in the position and in the company. Listen to what is said during the interview and ask for additional information later.
- Maintain the three Cs It's OK to feel nervous—inside. But on the outside, you need to stay Cool, Calm, and Confident. Remember, you can do the job; make sure the interviewer knows it, too.

LIVEWORKSHEETS

6. You should become familiar with the job before your interview.

7. For an interview, dress in a way that expresses your personality.

8. Asking questions in an interview shows you didn't pay attention.

9. You should be polite but not overly friendly in an interview.

10. In an interview, immediately answer any question that's asked.

11. Even if you're nervous, you should try to seem calm and confident.

12. It's all right to be a little late for an interview.
