WRITTEN COMPOSITION

EXPOSITORY WRITING NOTES

Instructions: Write these notes neatly in your Written Composition/Journal notebook. Show them to me tomorrow and get "on task" points. Remember to head up your book properly, draw your margin lines and skip a line after each bullet point.

What is Expository Writing?

An expository writing is a type of writing that is meant to inform, define, or explain the author's subject to a reader. Expository writing is usually non-fiction because it gives true and factual information.

Types of Expository Writing

1. Reports
2. How-to Essays
3. Research Papers

Keys to An Effective Expository Paragraph

- a title
- a topic sentence
- transitions
- good explanations and examples
- a conclusion

Examples of Transition Words and Phrases

First, firstly, first of all, to begin, second, secondly, then, next, after that, before, the next step, another, too, also, in addition to, furthermore, further, again, additionally, to continue, to conclude, lastly, finally, in conclusion

LIVEWORKSHEETS

I am done writing my notes in my book:

LIVEWORKSHEETS