Three popular restaurants

Corner Foods

This lovely little restaurant is in the centre of town opposite the railway station. Every day they open at midday and don't close until 10pm. They serve quick snacks as well as hot meals, but no desserts. If you are in a hurry, they can make you a sandwich in five minutes. The hot food they sell is fast food. They have fresh burgers which you can have with or without cheese. All hot meals are served with chips and salad. They also have sausages, eggs and chicken. It's a first-come-first-served system. No parking available.

Road Meals

This is an Italian family restaurant with a famous chef. It is open Mondays to Saturdays from 12pm to 10pm. You have to book a table before you go. There isn't a train station or bus stop next to it. You have to use your car or bike to go there. It has a free car and bicycle park for customers. There is a special pizza oven in the kitchen and they make all the pizzas fresh. Keep in mind that it will take some time to prepare your meal, so, while you are waiting for the food, you could enjoy a fresh salad or a soup. After the meal, they serve strawberries with fresh cream.

Jane's Place

Jane's Place opens at 7am for people on their way to work or school. Customers who order food before 9am get a free cup of coffee or a free glass of juice. At 11am, Jane's Place changes to the lunch menu which includes delicious dishes, like roast chicken and vegetables or grilled mushrooms and steak. All dishes are made fresh so they may take time to cook. If you are thirsty, they make the best lemonade in town. Jane's Place is only open Monday to Friday and closes at 4pm every day. There's no need to book a table. Parking your car or bike, next door, costs £1 an hour.

For each question, choose the correct answer.

My Canadian trip by Louise Walton

Last year I went on an amazing trip – travelling by boat on a guided group tour along the west coast of Canada. It was my brother Harry's idea. He's a journalist, like me, and he wanted to write articles about the trip. He's also a great fan of boats, although that's one interest we definitely don't share. But I'd dreamt of visiting the area ever since seeing it on TV as a child, especially as I knew it was where our great-grandparents had lived before moving to Europe. So I kept asking Harry if I could go too – until he finally agreed!

A few weeks before we left home, there were storms in the area we were going to. But luckily the forecast for the time we intended to be there was for calm seas. Although there was plenty to arrange, I was busy at work so didn't have much time to think about what needed doing. But Harry promised he'd taken care of everything, so I knew everything would be all right.

After arriving in Canada, we joined the group, packed our limited supplies into small boats and set off. The guide had mentioned that very few people now lived along that coast, and sure enough, the only other living creatures we saw for the first few days were dolphins and birds. We knew there were islands in the distance, but the early-morning fog made it hard to see very far, so I just focussed on the beautiful patterns our boat made in the water.

We often stopped for hours to explore the rock pools on the beaches. They were full of amazing coloured fish, many of which I didn't recognise. And it was great to be able to stop caring about how quickly or slowly the day was passing. We never forgot lunch or dinner, though, which we all made together over camp fires. When we finally fell asleep on the boats each evening, even though the beds were hard, it really felt like stress-free living!

When the time came to leave, I was sad. How could I return to normal life again? But I knew if I stayed, I'd miss family and friends. I was also looking forward to telling everyone at home about our adventures!

C spending the nights in comfort.

D not having to worry about time.

18. What would Louise write in her diary during the trip?

A There are wonderful pools along the coast, left behind by the sea. I wish we had the time to look at them more carefully.

B I can't believe I'm in the same place I saw on that programme ages ago. Our great-grandparents would be amazed!

C We've brought a lot of stuff with us in the boats - I'm sure it's not all necessary. It's surprising they don't sink!

D It'll be hard to say goodbye to the place at the end, but I can't wait to get back to work - I've really missed it.
