เรื่อง Cross-Cultural Communication

Reading Comprehension

Communicating Across Cultures

People from different cultures may communicate in different ways. In Thailand, people often greet each other with a "wai." In many Western countries, people usually shake hands. In Japan, people may bow to show respect.

Eye contact also has different meanings. In some cultures, direct eye contact shows confidence and honesty. However, in other cultures, too much eye contact may be considered disrespectful.

Food, clothing, personal space, gestures, and ways of speaking can also be different. When communicating with people from other cultures, we should listen carefully, avoid making assumptions, and respect cultural differences. Good cross-cultural communication can reduce misunderstandings and help people build positive relationships.
