A Day to Celebrate

September 15 is a holiday in Japan. It is called Keiro no Hi. This is a day when one shows respect for older people. Keiro no Hi became a national holiday in 1966. Today people in Japan give gifts to people who are 70 years old or older. It is a way to let the older people know they are special and important. Older people may celebrate their long life with their families on this day. In some schools, children make gifts to give to their grandparents. Communities have celebrations, such as sports events, on Keiro no Hi. Tokyo, the largest city in Japan, has a special ceremony for the country's older citizens.

Rayshaun took his place on the track for the next running event, the 100-meter dash. He thought about his hero, Jesse Owens, who also ran track in high school. Over 80 years ago, Owens tied the world record for the 100-meter dash several times with a time of 9.4 seconds. Rayshaun's best time was 9.8. Could he tie Owen's record today?

The starting gun went off! The runners raced down the track. Rayshaun tried to do his best.

When Rayshaun crossed the finish line, the clock showed 9.7 seconds. Rayshaun had taken a tenth of a second off of his time. He was even closer to Owen's record!
