It all started last summer, when I decided to go back to the village (1) ..... where I'd grown up ..... . As soon as I arrived, I realised that it was very different from the place (2) ..... . The beautiful old pub had been pulled down, and in its place was a modern hotel (3) .... I went inside. The young woman (4) ..... was wearing almost enough paint to do the job. I took a room, left my case and decided to go for a walk.

Outside, there was a man standing near my car. As I came out, he quickly put away the notebook (5) .... , said 'Good morning', and disappeared into the hotel.

My old house was a lovely old place with a long curving drive. When I reached it, I saw that the windows were all boarded up. There was a notice on the gate (6) .... Puzzled, I walked up the drive towards the house. The door opened and out came two large dogs followed by a huge man (7) ..... . 'Can't you read?' he asked. I left.

That evening there was a knock on my hotel room door. It was the man (8) .... He gave me a package (9) .... , and waited in the doorway while I opened it. Inside was a necklace (10) .... and (11) .... 'You recognise it, of course,' he said. 'And now, there's someone downstairs (12) ..... .'

His arms were as thick as my legs.
It said 'PRIVATE: KEEP OUT'.
I'd given it to my daughter on her sixth birthday.
It had my name on it.
He wants to talk to you.
She was sitting on reception.
~~I'd grown up there.~~
I'd seen him in the car park.
It badly needed a coat of paint.
She wore it day and night.
I remembered it from my younger days.
He'd been writing in it.
