A day in a Mennonite boy's life.

Jacob is 12 years old. He lives in a Mennonite Colony near Guatrache, La Pampa. He starts his day very early at 6 a.m. He has breakfast with his family and then he helps in his father's carpentry. He has lunch at 12 a.m. and goes to school. He finishes school this year. In his Colony, children go to school from 5 to 12 years old. They don't attend high school.

After school, he goes home and helps his father in carpentry. They work until sunset. Then, he has dinner and goes to bed. He doesn't watch TV. They don't have electricity. On Sunday morning, Jacob and his family go to church. Then, they have lunch with friends or visit Jacob's grandparents.
