Earth Report!

Futurologist Carla Wright speaks to our journalist

'We have clear evidence that in the next few years the Earth's climate change. With the change of climate, many species of animals, such as the Bengal tiger, disappear. In my opinion, climatic changes most probably affect people's lives, too.

For example, because of global warming, the sea has already destroyed some coastal villages and the information we have shows that this destruction become more widespread in the future.

We can hope that life on Earth get better in the future but frankly, I'm not optimistic. Personally, I fear that the quality of our lives get worse.
