A This happens from time to time when small boats run into difficulties in heavy weather.

B But there is a twist to this tale.

C Less than two hours later the enormous boat is alongside you, having altered course to come to your rescue.

D Finally you admit defeat and put out an SOS call.

E He was stunned by the coincidence.

F The cruise liner that came to his assistance was the Crown Princess.

IT'S A SMALL WORLD

Picture this: You're in a boat, a small one, easily 4,000 miles away from home. You're being tossed from one wave to another in appalling conditions. Your mast has been damaged in a fierce storm and you haven't eaten for two days whilst trying to fix your craft and remain afloat. [1_____] You wait, hoping beyond hope that someone has heard you and can reach you before conditions worsen still further.

You're lucky. The message gets relayed to a cruise liner that is carrying thousands of passengers on the holiday of a lifetime and just happens to be in your vicinity. [2_____] You are very grateful. You are taken on board where you're given food and medical assistance and start to feel human again. You travel with the liner safely to land. Your small boat has unfortunately had to be abandoned in the ocean but you are safe thanks to the cruise liner.

So far, a straightforward sea rescue. [3_____] It's certainly not unheard of for large vessels to come to the aid of smaller ones, particularly in the big oceans where you can drift for days without seeing another boat. [4_____] The yachtsman whose boat got into trouble was John Fielder, a thirty-two-year-old man from a tiny village on the south coast of England called Warsash. Last year John was sailing a trimaran called (appropriately) 'Dangerous When Wet' from the Caribbean island Antigua to Rhode Island, north of New York, when he got into trouble. [5_____] She was the latest addition to the fleet of the US based Princess Cruises and it was captained by Captain Clark. Captain Clark and John Fielder had never met before, which is not surprising. What is surprising is that it turned out the two men live round the corner from each other in that tiny village of Warsash on the south coast! In all probability they buy their newspapers from the same shop but didn't meet until their paths crossed 4,000 miles away in the middle of the ocean!
