NOISE POLLUTION

Noise is more than a mere nuisance. (26) _____ certain levels and durations of exposure, it can cause physical damage to the eardrum, and (27) _____ in temporary or permanent hearing loss. (28) _____ causing hearing loss, excessive noise exposure can also (29) _____ blood pressure and pulse rates, cause irritability, anxiety, and mental fatigue, and interfere with sleep, recreation, and personal communication. Noise pollution control is, therefore, (30) _____ importance in the workplace and in the community.

Noise effects can be (31) _____ by a number of techniques, for example, increasing the distance or blocking the path between the noise source and the recipient, reducing noise levels at the source, and (32) _____ recipients with earplugs or earmuffs. Increasing path distance is very effective because, as a sound wave spreads outward from the source, the fixed (33) _____ of energy in the wave is dissipated over an ever-expanding wave front. Path barriers (34) _____ walls, ceilings, and floors can be effective by absorbing as well as reflecting sound energy. Special earmuffs are available to protect industrial and construction workers.

The best way (35) _____ noise pollution is to reduce the sound levels at the source, for instance, by improving design, muffling machinery and engines, and properly maintaining and lubricating machinery to reduce vibration.

VI. Read the passage carefully, then choose the correct answers.

ECOTOURISM

Ecotourism is a combination of ecology (the study of systems of living things) and tourism. The International Ecotourism Society defines ecotourism as 'responsible travel to natural areas that conserves the environment and improves the well-being of the local people'. Actually, ecotourism can mean travel to far-off places of great natural beauty, but not always in a responsible way. It is a big business, and the allure of money can cause people to think about profits first. While ecotourism offers benefits for people and ecosystem, it leaves ecosystems open to negative effects too.

Costa Rica has an ecotourism industry worth over one billion dollars yearly, and thousands of jobs have been created. Nearly 21% of the land is now protected national parks, largely thanks to ecotourism. Nonetheless, due to the number of people visiting the country's natural places, some damage to the ecosystem has occurred. At one national park in Costa Rica, wild monkeys now feed on garbage left by the tourists. Furthermore, ecotourists tend to seek out places with the rarest animals and plants, pressuring the most delicate of living things.

Controlling abuses isn't easy. Corruption can lead officials to tolerate ecological damage. For example, a large resort facility, normally not allowed near a sanctuary, might be allowed if the company pays enough money to certain people in the government. Limited resources are another issue. Areas of forests and beaches that would require an army to protect are often watched by several employees.

It is easy to be critical of the ecotourism industry, but it is important to be positive as well. Ecotourism can never be 'pure'. We can't expect zero negative effects on the ecosystem. It is also unrealistic to think that humans won't go anywhere accessible them. If protection efforts are maintained and intensified, those remaining places of undisturbed nature may be stressed, but they won't be destroyed.

36. In reality, ecotourism _____.
    A. is a responsible way to travel
    B. means exactly as it is defined
    C. ensures the well-being of nature as well as of the local people
    D is different from how the International Ecotourism Society defines it
37. The word 'allure' in paragraph 1 is closest in meaning to _____.
    A benefits B attraction C damage D ecosystems
38. What is the effect of ecotourism on Costa Rica?
    A It has turned half of the country into national parks.
    B It has earned the country a lot of money.
    C It has created well-paid jobs.
    D It has destroyed the ecosystem.
39. Why might a large resort be available near a sanctuary?
    A The army could not protect the sanctuary.
    B Abuses are allowed for large resort facility.
    C The government officials have been bribed.
    D There are not enough officials near the sanctuary.
40. What does the author suggest in the final paragraph?
    A Some negative effects on the ecosystem are acceptable.
    B We should not allow ecotourism.
    C We should make more places accessible to humans.
    D Undisturbed nature is the highest priority.
