Almaty-home to many nationalities

Almaty is the biggest city in Kazakhstan and 58% of the population lives there. Almaty has almost 2 million people. Around 50% of them are Kazakh, but the other 50% have parents, grandparents and more distant ancestors from lots of different nations. For example, around a third of people have families from Russia, but there are also a lot of from China, Korea, Ukraine and other places. Artur and Sofia are two of those people.

Artur

My grandparents come from Russia. They speak Russia, Kazakh and German. They are my heroes. They help me a lot with my homework. My grandfather knows a lot of things, so I always ask him when I want to know something. My grandmother tells me lots of stories about her family. I love to listen to them; they are full of really interesting people. All my grandparents' children live in Almaty, but they have brothers and sisters in Russia. Unfortunately, my parents and I don't see them very often.

Sofia

My parents come from Korea but this is our home now. My parents speak Korean, but for me it's a second language. I can understand it, but I don't speak much. In our class, there are five different nationalities. My best friend Alexander's family are Germany. They don't speak German at home, but Alexander likes studying it at school. We often go to each's homes to watch films or play computer games. It's great because we also learn about each other's cultures and food.
