Kassini is eight years old. She loves to cook. She reads a cook book in the school bus every morning and before bedtime.

Nobody knows her secret, that she sleeps with a wooden mingling stick every night. When she sleeps, she dreams that she is smiling. Wearing a chef's hat and holding her mingling stick high up in the air.

Kasisni loves to sing as she cooks. She sings to the carrots and dances with the flour, she slices the cucumber and places two on top of her eyes, she BANGS the saucepans loudly as she jumps up and down.

GET BACK TO WORK. The stick scolds.

Cooking is not work, it is fun; Kasini laughs.

The stick tells her if the soup needs more salt, if the chicken needs more heat and when the carrots are ready to eat.

Sometimes, Kasini doesn't listen the stick. I'll use my palm to taste the soup! She says.

Kasisni adds more salt and pepper to the soup, she knows this is wrong but she doesn't care.

Now she serves the soup they made.
