Simple Present vs. Present Continuous

Entonces, antes dijimos que el "Simple present" lo usamos para hablar de lo que hacemos habitualmente. Pero... ¿no les pasa a veces que en vez de hacer lo que hacen habitualmente, por ejemplo, todos los lunes, terminan haciendo otras actividades? Por ejemplo, un dia de lluvia nos puede cambiar la rutina:

On Mondays I usually play football in the garden, but today it is rainy, so I am watching a film on TV.

SIMPLE PRESENT VS. PRESENT CONTINUOUS

On Mondays I usually play football in the garden.	but today it is rainy, so I am watching a film on TV.
Simple Present, my routine (Presente simple, mi rutina, lo que usualmente hago)	Present Continuous, what I am doing today (Presente continuo, lo que estoy haciendo hoy)

SIMPLE PRESENT VS. PRESENT CONTINUOUS

On Saturdays, I usually have a picnic with my family,	but today it is very windy, so we are eating in the kitchen
Simple Present, my routine (Presente simple, mi rutina, lo que usualmente hago)	Present Continuous, what I am doing today (Presente continuo, lo que estoy haciendo hoy)

B

The weather affected my routine
Let's practise!

Take a look at the routine and compare it with what happened this week.

My routine	This week
MONDAY	MONDAY
go to school by bike	go by bus

On Mondays, I go to school by bike, but today it is rainy so I am going by bus ¡Veamos esto!: Utilizamos so para indicar la consecuencia de una acción. Por ejemplo: On Mondays, I play football in the park, but today it is rainy so I am watching TV. Los lunes juego fútbol en el parque, pero hoy está lluvioso entonces estoy mirando televisión. Por otro lado, but lo vamos a utilizar para contrastar dos ideas.
