Malala Yousafzai: A young education activist from Pakistan

"One child, one teacher, one book and one pen can change the world"

Hi Malala. Welcome to our TV show Teens Have a Voice.
Hello and thank you for the invitation.

Please, tell us about the problem in your community.
Well, in Pakistan some girls can't study or work. Many marry at a young age. Only 66% of girls in Pakistan finish primary school. That is not fair!

Of course, it is not! Education is very important for boys and girls. What activities do you do to raise awareness about girls' education?
Well, I give speeches and write books to raise my voice in favour of girls. My most famous book is my autobiography named I Am Malala.

Wow! And that's a best seller! Why is your story so popular?
I think it is a best seller because I talk about equality for girls and women in the world. Raise your voice for equality! That is my book's mission.

Malala, thank you very much for your time. Do you have a message to share?
My personal quote is: "One child, one teacher, one book and one pen can change the world."

That's a great quote! Keep changing the world. We need more young activists like you.
Thank you very much.

Jose Quisocala: A Young banker from Arequipa, Peru

"Use your creativity to change the world!"

Jose Adolfo, welcome to our radio show Young Leaders. Nice to meet you.
It's nice to meet you too. Thanks for the invitation.

Please, tell us about the problem in your community.
In my community some teenagers and kids quit school and start to work because their families need the money.

That's terrible!
It is, so I started Bartselana Student Bank with one mission: to help students earn money and save it too.

That's interesting! But, how do students earn money?
Well, with the help of my school, we set up a kiosk where teenagers and kids can sell used paper and plastic to recycling centres.

Great idea!
Then, teenagers and kids open bank accounts at Bartselana Student Bank and the money from the plastic and paper they sell is deposited into their accounts. There are more than 3500 students with accounts at Bartselana Student Bank.

Fantastic! The bank helps teenagers, children and the environment, too.
I am proud of this project.

Do you have a message to share?
Use your creativity to change the world! Jane Goodall says: "Children can change the world".

That's a great message! Keep changing the world. We need more young innovators like you.
Thank you very much.
