Ecuador's All Souls Day is a traditional holiday that is celebrated on November 2nd. Families get together at cemeteries to spend time with their beloved ones who passed away.

How? Basically, what they do is bring two culinary traditions: guaguas de pan and colada morada.

Guaguas de pan is bread baked in the shape of sort of dough babies decorated with colorful toppings.

Colada morada is a traditional hot beverage cooked with strawberries and some other spices.

The point is to share the food with the beloved ones who are gone by leaving the food next to their graves. The tradition says that dead people eat the food at night, when no one is at the cemetery.
