
From Paolo

Dear Daniel,

My name is Paolo Morini and I study English at a secondary school in Florence, Italy. My teacher gave me your name and email address because you are my partner in the School Languages Exchange Program this year. It's great news, and I'm just writing to say hello and to say that I'm very excited we'll have the chance to do the exchange.

On my plan it says that I will study at your school in February and then you will come to Florence in June. February is very soon, so I'm pretty nervous! Is there anything you can tell me about your home and family? Is your school very big? I'm really looking forward to hearing from you.

Let me know if you need any information about Florence.

Best wishes,

Paolo

Write an email to Paolo, an exchange student from another Australia. He will live with your family for a week and go to your school. Introduce yourself and tell him useful information.
In your email, you should say:

- Your name, age, school, and class
- Who introduce Paolo to you
- How you feel.
- Why you write this email to him
- Tell him when he can go to your house
- How your house is
- You will share your room with him or not
- How he and you can go to school
- What food he will eat
- How the weather is in Ho Chi Minh
- What clothes he should bring
- What he and you will do after school
