Extreme holidays by Brenda Pill

Last winter, my parents, my brother and I spent our holidays in Scotland. My dad (a) loves / hates skiing and (b) wanted skiing / wanted to ski down the mountain several times, so once we went up to the top with him¹. Mum and Luke, my brother, (c) are / were really cold, so they stayed at a small café and asked for hot chocolate and cakes.

Dad invited me to have a try and I agreed. We (d) were going / went to the cabin to put on our skiing equipment. While we (e) were waiting / waited for the instructor to call us, we heard the sound of a siren. What was it²? We didn't have time to think twice. A severe blizzard started. The wind started blowing and the thick snow made it impossible to see well. Dad and I couldn't see the café – it was 15 metres from the cabin. Many people (f) was / were screaming. Dad tried to contact Mum but her mobile phone was not working.

A few hours later, the (g) flood / storm stopped and we³ got out of the cabin as soon as we could. Some people were digging the snow out of the café entrance, so we ran to meet Mum and Luke. It was funny! They⁴ were still eating some delicious cake and (f) had / having their hot chocolate. They were not afraid at all!
