Questions 16–20

Five sentences have been removed from the text below.
For each question, choose the correct answer.
There are three extra sentences which you do not need to use.

An underwater photo-journalist talks about his job

As an underwater photo-journalist, I've spent thousands of hours taking photographs beneath the ocean waves, and producing pictures and articles for magazines and TV. My work's taken me to many countries, where I've photographed and written about some of the most amazing ocean animals that exist. Being an underwater photo-journalist, however, isn't just about taking beautiful pictures. 16 _____

I spend a lot of time researching animals that live in the oceans. Before even starting to plan a new article, I consider which ones are important or interesting for people to read about; for example, species that are becoming increasingly rare, or less well-known creatures. 17 _____ Then I need to find out things like the best places to find that creature and the best time of year to go there.

Understanding animal behaviour is obviously important when it comes to underwater photography, so it's essential that I research that properly too. Apart from reading scientific journals, I speak to experts who spend their lives working with a particular species. 18 _____ Occasionally, I've even included these experts in the final published article.

My favourite animals to photograph and write about are whales and sharks. On one trip, I was photographing a species of whale which had rarely seen humans underwater before. 19 _____ But, to my surprise, I discovered that these whales were amazingly curious and trusting. Sharks are also wonderful to photograph – they're so powerful and move through the water so beautifully. 20 _____ I think that's a shame, and as a journalist, I have the opportunity to show what they're really like; if people understood them better, I'm sure they'd respect them, and not be so afraid of them.

LIVEWORKSHEETS

A	It was an unknown situation for me and I didn't know what to expect.
B	However, studying them certainly helped me take great photographs on the trip.
C	It can actually take me up to a year to make a decision.
D	It's useful to go to these places with other photographers.
E	I sometimes invite them to come on a photographic trip to see what I do.
F	Despite this, people often have a negative view of these animals.
G	It also involves studying a wide variety of creatures.
H	They wanted to find out more about me.
