Young adventurers

Most people <sup>1</sup> ..... (never visit) the North Pole, but Parker Liataud has. Last year, Parker <sup>2</sup> ..... (ski) 130 km across the Arctic in freezing temperatures. In the same year, he also <sup>3</sup> ..... (start) a Facebook page about climate change. It's amazing because Parker is only sixteen years old and still <sup>4</sup> ..... (not finish) school – he's a very young explorer.

<sup>5</sup> ..... you ..... (ever be) to the South Pole? Maybe not, but in 2009, Katie Walter <sup>6</sup> ..... (walk) there and back in twenty days. She was only seventeen years old and she <sup>7</sup> ..... (make) a lot of money for charity.

Parker and Katie <sup>8</sup> ..... (achieve) great things, but they are both still teenagers. <sup>9</sup> ..... they ..... (do) too much, too young? Some people think so. Some psychologists say that it's dangerous for teens to take these risks because their brains <sup>10</sup> ..... (not develop) enough. Katie and Parker probably disagree! What do you think?
