

Choose the correct form of the verb to fill the gap.

As a US citizen, Virginia could France legally. For this reason, a cover story was that would her presence in the country. She was to as a French-speaking American journalist back reports of the war in France to her superiors at the New York Post. As part of her cover, Virginia had for and been a job at the newspaper, but they not aware that she also a spy.

In August 1941, a boat Virginia to Lisbon in Portugal, and from there she a train to Vichy in France. Vichy and the southern half of France had not yet been by the German army.