Karate is a very popular sport among teenagers in Britain. Stacy McCarthy and Jonathan are fifteen years old. They're junior karate champions. People think that karate is easy, and that after one training lesson you can be really good. But it's not like that at all. 'I started when I was six,' says Stacy. 'There are a lot of rules to remember. You need to practise a lot.' The karate belt system is long and difficult. Beginners wear a white belt. After six months they can take an exam for the next level, the red belt. Then, there are five more belts.

Is it a difficult life for the junior karate champions? 'We usually come to the club three times a week for training, but when we're preparing for a tournament, we practise every day.' What about their free time? Stacy says: 'We haven't got a lot of free time, but I sometimes go to the cinema with friends.' Jonathan also plays tennis and football at school on Tuesday and Thursday. He loves sports. He's very good at them!

1. The text is about Stacy and Jonathan's free time activities.	T	F
2. Stacy thinks karate is easy.	T	F
3. There are seven belts in karate in total.	T	F
