1. Read the text and choose the correct sentences.

Fast fashion is new. In the 1990s, merchants introduced fashionable, inexpensive, poorly-made items weekly to match fashion's fast speed. Cheap, convenient, consumable fashion emerged.

Due to their distinct business structures, fast fashion startups prospered throughout the pandemic. They're fully online, so they can send the new styles they produce everyday straight from their warehouses, avoiding supply chain issues and U.S. import charges. Overseas labor and synthetic materials keep costs low. However, fast fashion's relentless cycle of consumption means our garments are more likely than ever to become part of the 92 million tons of textile trash created yearly.
