The Smaller Lung

Everyone has two lungs. One of your lungs is smaller than the other lung. What lung is smaller? Why is one lung smaller than the other?

Your left lung is smaller than your right lung. This is so that there is room for your heart. Your heart occupies more of the left side of your body than you right side. (For a few people, the opposite is true.)

Your heart is a powerful pumping organ. It is about the size of your fist. When it beats, it pumps. It pumps blood around your body through blood vessels. Your heart beats around sixty to eighty times a minute. If you run fast, it may beat two hundred times a minute!

1. Everyone has _____ lungs.
2. The left lung is smaller because you need _____ for your heart.
3. Your heart is as big as _____.
4. Your heart bumps blood through _____.
5. Your heart may beat _____ a minute if you ran fast.
