Freddie Mercury

Freddie Mercury was a famous British rock singer and songwriter. He was famous because he was the lead singer of "Queen". He was the author of such world hits as "We Are the Championship" and "Bohemian Rhapsody". Freddie was born on September 5th, 1946, on the island of Zanziba. He studied at the St Peter's School in Panchgani from 1954 and lived with his uncle and aunt. His real name was Farrokh Bulsara and it was so difficult to pronounce that local kids started calling him Freddie.

At school, Freddie didn't like sports much. However, he was the champion in ping-pong. Aged 12, he won the first Cup. Apart from that, he loved painting and often made drawings of surrounding people. And, of course, he was crazy about music from the very young age. He loved listening to music and singing. The surrounding music was mostly Indian, but there were some western songs too. His musical talent was soon noticed by the headmaster of the school; he wrote a letter to his parents asking to give him the opportunity to study music seriously. That's when he started taking piano classes. When he was 12, together with his friends and classmates, he organized the first rock band called "The Hectics". They played at school parties and various anniversaries.

Having graduated from school, he returned to Zanzibar. In 1964, his family left the country because of the revolution and they moved to England. When he was 17, Freddie entered the Art College. At the college he met Tim Staffel, who invited him to participate in his band's rehearsals and he started singing again. When Staffel left the band in 1970, Freddie became the lead vocalist. That's when Freddie changed his surname to Mercury and the band's name to "Queen". He also created the logo for the band.

He married Mary Austin in 1970 and they divorced in 1976. He remarried Jim Hutton in 1985 and they divorced in 1991.

After long searching he found the guitarist John Deacon and in 1972 they could already release the first album. The band quickly became world famous. In 1979, the singer was invited to perform with the British Royal Ballet. A year later, he completely changed his image and started wearing a moustache and short hair. He started his solo career and released his album "Mr. Bad Guy" (1985). There was the time when he performed together with a world famous opera singer Monserrat Caballe. Since 1986, the press announced that Freddie was seriously ill, but he denied the rumors. Only in November 1991 he officially confirmed that he had AIDS. He won the Brit Award In 1990. He died of bronchial pneumonia on November 24, 1991 in London. In 1992, many famous people and his friends gave a special concert to commemorate the legendary singer.
