I am a very popular bug, if I must say so myself. People hate mosquitoes, swat flies, and scream at cockroaches and spiders, but everybody treats me with respect. Yes, my relatives and I are special friends of farmers everywhere, because we eat harmful insects such as aphids and scale insects.

While mosquitoes are dodging poison sprays and flies are ducking the swatter, my friends and I are being collected to be sent to all parts of the country to wage war on harmful insects. We are usually caught in the fall when we are hibernating on rocks or logs. People look for our colorful bodies—often red with black spots. We are then put in cold storage until spring.

After a rather stuffy journey in straw packing, we are released over gardens and fields. We will help to save the plants by eating the insects that are destroying them.

Please don't think I'm bragging, but my relatives in Australia were shipped over to California some years ago and saved a whole orange crop by eating the cottony cushion scales that had attacked them.

By now you have learned why I am popular. I am helpful and don't have any annoying ways. You can learn a lesson from me. If you're a pest, people don't want you around, but if you go out of your way to help, you've got it made! Just a little hint from a ladybug who knows what she's talking about!
