Round 1:
Local inviting a foreign friend

Local: "Hey! Would you like to come to the Pawkar Raymi festival with me next weekend?"
Foreign Friend: "That sounds interesting! What is Pawkar Raymi about?"
Local: "It's a traditional festival where we celebrate the blooming of flowers and the beginning of the planting season. There are colorful parades, traditional music, and lots of delicious food."
Foreign Friend: "Wow, that sounds amazing! What kind of activities can we do there?"
Local: "There will be dancing, singing, and we can even participate in some of the traditional rituals. Plus, there's a big market where you can buy local crafts and food."
Foreign Friend: "I'd love to experience that! What should I wear to the festival?"
Local: "Just wear something comfortable, but if you want, you can try wearing traditional clothes. It will make the experience even more authentic."
Foreign Friend: "Great! I'm really looking forward to it. Thank you for inviting me!"

Round 2:
Switching Roles

Now, I'll be the foreign friend and you can be the local inviting me.

Foreign Friend: "Hey! Would you like to come to the Pawkar Raymi festival with me next weekend?"
Local: "That sounds interesting! What is Pawkar Raymi about?"

Go ahead and continue the conversation!
