In 1897 J. J. Thomson, discovered that the atom can be split into smaller particles and found that one of those particles has a negative charge. He named that part electron. J. J. Thomson worked in the Cavendish Laboratory at Cambridge University.

LIVEWORKSHEETS