Making Movies

Did you know a movie is made of lots and lots of photographs?

A movie camera takes hundreds of photos every minute (24 photos every second). When we watch a movie, we are watching these photos. We see the actors move because we see a lot of photos very quickly.

Traditional animations are made this way, too. Animations use pictures or models. The models can't move. But the movie director takes hundreds of photos of the models. In each photo, there are small differences. When the movie plays, we see the changes very quickly. The models look like they're moving!
