How do you know if you have an Internet addiction? Avoiding responsibilities or becoming annoyed when they are not online are some of the signs. Internet addicts prefer the online world over real-life activities.

Internet addiction causes a lot of problems for teens. Firstly, when teens spend all their time online, they don't have as much time for studying or doing homework. As a result, they get bad marks. It can also affect their relationships. Many teens with Internet addiction struggle to make friends, and they can even lose the friends they have.

There are a few reasons that Internet addiction is more common among teens. Teens often feel a need for connection with others, and they can get bored easily. It's also easy for teens to access the Internet with smartphones or other devices. This makes it challenging for teens to limit their Internet use.
