The Story of Haruan Mas

A long time ago, in a small village near a river, there was a poor fisherman named Badu. Did he catch many fish every day? No, he did not. Sometimes, he returned home with nothing. One day, Badu saw a big golden fish in the river. Did he try to catch it? Yes, he did. After many tries, he caught the fish and brought it home.

When Badu's wife saw the golden fish, she was surprised. "Did you find this fish in our river?" she asked. Badu smiled and nodded. They cooked the fish, but when they cut it, they found gold coins inside. Did they believe it at first? No, they did not. They thought it was a dream.

The next day, Badu went back to the river. Did he hope to catch another golden fish? Yes, he did. However, he did not see any fish. Day after day, he waited but found nothing. Did he feel sad? Yes, he did. One evening, he saw the same golden fish again. "Will you give me more gold if I let you go?" Badu asked. The fish nodded and disappeared into the water.

From that day, Badu and his wife lived happily. Did they tell anyone about the golden fish? No, they did not. They respected the river and thanked it for their fortune. Every year, they threw flowers into the river to honor the golden fish. Did they ever forget the fish? No, they did not. The village believed the golden fish brought luck and happiness to those who respected nature.
