Timeline: viral phenomenon

Everyone wants their videos to go viral. Check out this timeline of four memorable viral sensations. Have you seen them?

Gangnam Style, 2012

Gangnam Style is a pop song by the South Korean musician Psy. It was released on 15th July and by 21st December it had become the first YouTube video to reach one billion views. It spread virally thanks to positive comments by bloggers and famous musicians including Katy Perry who shared it on Twitter. The song features some amusing dance moves including one that imitates riding a horse. The dance has been recreated by people all over the world including the US President Barack Obama.

Ice Bucket Challenge, 2014

This summer craze consisted of challenging three people to make a $100 donation to charity or be videoed pouring a bucket of ice-cold water over themselves and making a smaller donation. Many people chose the water option which was great entertainment. The challenge went viral when over a few days in July various US golfers performed the challenge. It raised over $220 million for charity.

The Mannequin Challenge, 2016

In this viral internet trend, participants stayed completely still while one person with a camera moved around them filming them. It is thought students at a high school in Florida, USA, started it in late October and by early November it was viral. Many US sports teams took up the challenge with athletic-looking frozen positions. The challenge wasn't for charity but was simple fun with no complicated dance moves to learn!

Baby Shark, 2018

This old children's song was turned into a video by Pinkfong, a South Korean education company which released it in 2016. It is thought that Korean pop bands helped its success by performing it at concerts. However, it didn't go viral until 2018 when a #BabySharkChallenge was started and people began filming themselves recreating the song and its simple dance moves. It is the most watched educational video in history with over five billion views.
