A different life

Emma Livingston works for a children's organization in Africa. Every day, she writes her blog for an online news website.

Tuesday, 15th August

Every morning, I get up at 6 o'clock and go to the camp. One thousand families live there. They don't have much food or water.

At the moment, I'm working in the school and helping some teachers. I'm at the school right now. It's in a big, old house near the camp, and it's open to children from five to 12 years old. It's usually hot inside. I'm teaching three classes today.

When the children arrive at school at a quarter past seven, they go into the house and meet their friends. They talk and play games. They love games! Then, classes start at a quarter past eight. The children can speak a little English, but they can't write in English. I'm teaching them to write words and sentences.

The children love asking questions. They have questions about my life in England, my family, and about my boyfriend! The teachers make some food for the children, and they eat it before they go home. The children go back to their families in the afternoon.

There's a computer in the school and I use it to send emails to my family and my boyfriend. I usually have my dinner about 7 o'clock, but tonight I'm meeting my friend. She's German and we're cooking something together.

Example: There are one thousand families at the c*amp*.
