Bun Cha is one of Hanoi's most beloved dishes, made famous worldwide after US President Barack Obama enjoyed it with chef Anthony Bourdain in 2016. This traditional Vietnamese dish features grilled pork served in a bowl of flavorful broth, accompanied by a plate of soft vermicelli noodles (bun) and a basket of fresh herbs like lettuce, coriander, and perilla leaves. The pork is usually marinated in a mixture of fish sauce, sugar, garlic, and shallots before being grilled over charcoal, giving it a smoky aroma and rich flavor. Diners dip the noodles and herbs into the broth with the grilled pork, creating a harmonious blend of sweet, salty, sour, and savory tastes. In Hanoi, Bun Cha is a lunchtime favorite, enjoyed both in street food stalls and small restaurants. We take part in many outdoor activities at school, but my favourite is climbing mountains during our annual spring trip. First, we gather in groups and prepare our backpacks. Then we hike along the trail, enjoying the fresh air and beautiful views. This activity is exciting because it challenges us and helps us stay fit. I always feel proud and happy when we finally reach the mountain top together.
