DAVID ALMOND

Did he always want to be a writer?

Interestingly, it was always David Almond's ambition to become a writer, but he didn't plan to write books for children. As a child, he loved reading. He studied literature at university. When he finished, first he worked in a hotel, then he worked as a builder, and finally he became a primary school teacher. During his time as a teacher, he wrote his first stories.

When did he become famous?

David's first novel for young people was Skellig. It came out in 1998, after two books of stories for adults. The adult books didn't make him famous. But Skellig did. It was extremely popular. A film version appeared in 2009, but it wasn't a great success.

What does he do now?

David still writes novels and wins prizes. In 2010, he won a very important award, the Hans Christian Andersen Award. This award is for writers who make an important contribution to children's literature. Apart from writing, Almond loves running and football.
