Paul's holiday

Paul lives with his family in Yellow Rock town. He and his sister Sally go to Yellow Rock School.

On the last day of school, Paul's teacher said, "Listen, children, you have homework." First, the children were sad because they had homework, but they were happier when they listened more. "Your homework is to take a fun holiday photo."

Paul went with his family on a beach holiday. They wanted to go to a beach in a sunny country because they lived in a cold, cloudy town.

At their holiday house, Paul and Sally quickly put their bags in their rooms and ran down to the beach. Then, Paul's mum brought a small picnic and a blanket in a beach bag with her to the beach.

At the beach, Paul's mum smiled. "I love the sun," she said. Then big grey clouds hid the sun. It started to rain.

Sally had an idea. She got the blanket and held it above her head. Her mum and dad sat under it too.

"Do you have your phone, Dad?" asked Paul. "Can I take a photo with it?" Paul's dad gave him his phone and Paul took a photo of them under the blanket.

"Brilliant! That's my homework photo!" he laughed. "You look very funny!"
