1. READING COMPREHENSION: Read the text and answer the questions.

James has always been interested in architecture. Since he was a child, he has enjoyed drawing buildings and imagining how cities might look in the future. After finishing school, he decided to study engineering and began working for a construction company.

Last winter, while he was supervising an important project, something unexpected happened. A strong storm hit the city and damaged part of the building they were constructing. James and his team had been working on the project for over a year, so they were extremely disappointed. However, instead of giving up, they worked harder and managed to repair the damage within a few weeks.

One afternoon, while James was checking some plans, he met an old friend who had moved abroad several years earlier. They spent hours talking about their lives and future plans. His friend offered him a job in Paraguay, where several new housing projects were being developed.

Although James is happy with his current job, he has been considering the offer. He believes that working abroad could help him gain valuable experience. By the end of next year, he hopes to have made a final decision about his future.
