My free shopping trip

Have you ever been to a store and bought a dress that was too small or shoes that were too uncomfortable? I have. Have you ever bought clothes online and then never worn them? Yes, me too. In fact, although my closet is full, I usually wear the same pants and sweaters every week. I think most of my friends have the same problem.

Now imagine a clothing store with no checkout and no prices! Last weekend, I went to a store like that. It was a "clothes swap" at my school. Here's how it works. You bring clothes that are almost new, but that you don't want anymore. Then you swap with other people. I took twelve items to the clothes swap. When I arrived at about 9:30, it was already busy. One of the student organizers checked that my items were clean and almost new. Then she gave me twelve tickets – one ticket for each of my items – that I could swap for new clothes.

There were fitting rooms and mirrors, so I tried on a few things. I wanted a blue party dress, but there wasn't anything blue in my size. I decided not to look at the shoes at all. (I don't need more shoes!) Instead, I tried on a cute black skirt and white shirt. They were perfect. By lunchtime, I still had ten tickets, but it was time to go. Although I swapped two items for my original twelve – I was happy.

The clothes swap was a lot of fun. My closet and my bedroom are neater. Swapping is also good for the planet because it is a kind of recycling. The clothes I brought home are not new, but they feel new to me. I think swap events are something that everyone can enjoy. Happy swapping – and don't go shopping!
