George Lucas is one of the most famous film directors in the world; even if you've never heard his name before, you'll definitely know his films. For example, he directed one of the world's most popular film series: Star Wars!

Lucas was born in Modesto, California, in 1944. Throughout school, he raced cars with his friends, and he wanted to be a professional car driver. In 1962, he had a frightening experience. During one race, his car was hit by another car, flipping it over. He was almost killed by the accident! As he was recovering in hospital, he decided to stop racing. After school, he went to Modesto Junior College to study literature, sociology, and anthropology. It was here that Lucas became interested in films.

LIVEWORKSHEETS

He wanted to learn as much as he could about films, so he transferred to the USC School of Cinematic Arts. After years of film study and after making nine short films in the 1960s, his film career took off. In the 1970s, he started to direct longer films. It was during this time that he directed Star Wars. After his huge success with Star Wars, Lucas turned to other exciting film projects, including the Indiana Jones movies.

Lucas has started several film companies, too. He even started a company with his long-time friend and co-director, Francis Ford Coppola.
