The Beauty of Diversity

Nature imposes its conditions on Chile. As a result, Chileans have adapted their houses to tolerate the demands of nature and the variety of climates.

In the north of Chile, many people live in low, one-story homes made of a. stone / wood, mud, and straw. That is the case in San Pedro de Atacama, a highly touristic area located in the b. driest / largest desert in the world.

In the centre, we find Valparaíso, c. which / who was declared a Unesco World Heritage Site, due to the ingenuity of its architectural solutions. Homes in Valparaíso are d. uncoloured / colourful, made of various materials, and many are decorated with street art. They are located in the e. flatland / hillside, giving the city its characteristic landscape.

In the south of Chile, on the f. peninsula / island of Chiloé, peculiar houses are placed on posts buried in the beach. The sturdy g. wooden / cement poles supporting the traditional stilted houses, or palafitos, are built to protect houses from the rising and falling h. tides / rocks, and they've made the island famous around the world.

Together, these creative designs form the architecture of a country with not only diverse geography and constructions, but diverse people as well. Let's invite the rest of the world to visit and appreciate Chile's i. cultural / natural contribution.
