1) There is no doubt that the quarantine will spark an online learning boom.
FOREGONE

It is …….. the quarantine will spark an online learning boom.

2) She has a slim chance of passing the exam.
OUTSIDE

There is ……the exam.

3) It's very unlikely that e-learning will replace face-to-face learning.
LITTLE

There …… e-learning will replace face-to-face learning.

4) Privately educated students are more likely to get into Oxford.
STAND

Privately educated students …… into Oxford.

5) Even though his academic credentials are not impeccable, he can still get into Oxford.
IN

Even though his academic credentials are not impeccable, he …….. getting into Oxford.

LIVEWORKSHEETS

It tells the story of a free-spirited child who draws flowers in a rainbow of colors, only to be admonished by a teacher who scolds him:

Flowers are red young man
Green leaves are green
There's no need to see flowers any other way
Than the way they always have been seen

Eventually broken, the child falls into line and creates only red flowers with green leaves. When he moves to a new school, he finds a smiling teacher who says:

Painting should be fun
And there are so many colors in a rainbow
So let's use every one

But tragically, the little boy draws red flowers with green leaves in "neat" rows and tells the teacher:

Flowers are red, and green leaves are green
There's no need to see flowers any other way
Than the way they always have been seen

LIVEWORKSHEETS

It tells the story of a ..... (spirit) child who draws flowers in a rainbow of colours, only to be admonished by a teacher who scolds him:

Flowers are red young man
Green leaves are green
There's no need to see flowers any other way
Than the way they always have been seen

Eventually broken, the child falls ..... line and creates only red flowers with green leaves. When he moves to a new school, he finds a smiling teacher who says:

Painting should be fun
And there are so many colours in a rainbow
So let's use every one.

But tragically, the little boy draws red flowers with green leaves ..... "neat" rows and tells the teacher:

Flowers are red, and green leaves are green
There's no need to see flowers any other way
Than the way they always have been seen.

I have always loved the song and, truth be told, for a while it became my party piece because of it's jaunty tune, memorable chorus but most of all because of the story that it tells and some very important life lessons we should all take ..... board.

LIVEWORKSHEETS