

55 Introduction to international law

SECTION 8

International Law (or Public International Law) consists of rules and principles which govern the relations and dealings of nations with each other. It concerns itself only with questions of rights between several nations or nations and the citizens or subjects of other nations. In contrast, Private International Law deals with controversies between private persons, natural or juridical, arising out of situations having significant relationship to more than one nation. In recent years the line between public and private international law has become increasingly uncertain, because issues of private international law may also involve issues of public international law, and vice versa.

Look at the following legal areas and classify them into Public International Law or Private International Law.

~~adoption~~      arms control      asylum      contractual relations divorce      ~~environmental issues~~      human rights immigration      international crime      maritime law piracy      war crimes

Immigration is the movement of people to a new country; emigration is the movement of people from a country.

The United Nations (UN)

The UN, an intergovernmental organization established in 1945 as the successor to the League of Nations, is concerned with the maintenance of international peace and security. Its headquarters are in New York City. On December 10, 1948, the Declaration of Human Rights was issued, defining the civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights of human beings. Below are extracts from the first 10 articles (there are 30 in all). Complete the text by choosing the correct word from the box.
